Career Development Keynote Speaker

Michelle Enjoli helps professionals and leaders take ownership of their career development via an entrepreneurial lens. She believes they should market themselves, sell their value, make investments and take risks for career growth like they would their own business. She was a first-generation college student who landed her dream job as a television producer before graduation. Since then, she has worked for global brands in television broadcasting and marketing. In 2016, she established the first business resource group at Mercedes-Benz USA to foster connections between leaders and professionals for career growth and development.
